PROGRESS OF AMERICAN STORMS.—The report of the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute for 1866, refers to the line of march of the great American storms, as quoted below. Instead of progressing from South to North, as supposed by Dr. Franklin, the movement is from West to East; the storm presenting a line of battle, so to speak, that stretches from Canada to the Gulf, and fronting towards the passage of storms from one part of the country to the other was noticed by Dr. Franklin on the occasion of observing an eclipse of the moon. He showed that our northeast storms be produced before the commissioner shall make his report to the next term (general or are felt successively later and later as the point | special) of this Court. of observation is further to the northeast; that they arrive last at the extreme northeastern portions of our continent. We now know, however, that the successive appearance of the storm at points further along the coast is due to the easterly movements, sideways, as it were, of an atmospheric disturbance, greatly elongated north and south, and reaching sometimes from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. Hence to persons residing along the seaboard the phenomenon would appear to have a north- office, in the city of Alexandria, when and where wardly progression, on account of the north- I shall proceed to execute said decree. easterly trend of the coast; yet the storm not unfrequently reaches Bermuda simultaneously with Nova Scotia.

Few persons can have failed to observe the continued motion of the higher clouds from the west, or to have recognized the just meteoros-

copy of Shakspeare in a well known passage:

"The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And by the bright track of his firery car
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow."

The breaking forth of the sun just before his setting shows that the rear of the cloud which has obscured his beams, has, in its easterly course reached our horizon, and will soon give placeto an unobscured sky.

It must be observed, however, that all the storms which visit our coast are not of this nature; those denominated cyclones, and which seldom extend far into the interior, are probably of a rotary character. These usually commence in the Caribbean sea, move first to the northwest, and gradually curving round before

"ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE." On Wednesday night a gentleman put up at the Washington Hotel, and registered as "G. E. Noble, Wesfield, Massachusettes." A gentleman from the same State, at present residing in the city as a banker, and boarding at the same house, observing his name on the register, thought thatout of courtesy, though a stranger, he would call on him, and show him some attention. Accordingly he requested Mr. Davis, the accommodating clerk, to go up to the room of the stranger and announce him. Mr. Davis did so; but was met by a positive refusal on the part of the occupant of the room to open his door. Mr. Davis explained, but it was no use; the gentleman from the North was reso-

end of a battering ram.

Foiled and repulsed, the clerk withdrew and reported to the gentleman in awaiting below. The latter then determined to try his strategy. He ascended to the bolted door, hailed the vigilant watcher within, and asked for an interview. But the new arrival could not be caught in any such trap as that; he was too old a bird to be fooled with chaff—and the door re-mained unopened. The residenter explained that he was his friend; was from the same State, and only wanted to have a little friendly conversation with him. But it was no go; that was a very nice scheme, but it would not avail with him. And the gentleman intent on deeds of hospitality was, like his predecessor. forced to abandon his undertaking, retire and leave the stranger alone in his castle. No doubt his slumbers that night were disturbed by visions of bowie-knives and revolvers. What an awful idea they have of the sanguinary rebels up North. The stranger took his departure by the early train the next morning, rejoicing greatly no doubt, at his hair-breadth escape from murder, and probably ere now has written for the Tribune a highly colored description of ENGLISH FOX HUNTING ON THE DECLINE. -The London News says: "It is to be feared that the difficulties of fox hunting are on the increase. We are constantly reading of obstacles to sport raised by tenant farmers.—Dead foxes are found with increasing frequency, under circumstances of the gravest suspicion. Methods of fencing are also resorted to cion. Methods of fencing are also resorted to warded by mail to any address which make hunting not only difficult but cent of exceedingly dangerous; the worst of them being the use of wire, invisible at distances too small to allow of slackening speed. Complaints on this score become more numerous every year, and show that the free customs of sportsmen are no longer acquiesced in with the former cheerfulness by occupiers.
